DRUGGIST LOSES FOOT FROM SHOT

J. A. Robertson Shoots Self in Ankle, Necessitating Amputation

James A. Robertson, a North Oregon street druggist, accidentally shot himself in the left ankle Monday evening, causing a wound which made it necessary to amputate the foot above the ankle. Mr. Robertson was cleaning a Winchester shotgun in the rear room of his drug store when the compared when the compared to the co store, when the gun was accidentally discharged, the entire charge of shot en-tering his ankle, almost severing his

The druggist was pumping the shells from the gun at the time it was discharged, and it is thought that the trigger was pulled as he shifted the extractor. He was hurned to Providence hospital where the injured foot and ankle were amputated. Mr. Robertson was reported much improved Tuesday morning.

air IS EXPERIMENTING

Roe Makes Greatest Progress in Luther Burbank English Walnut

Alamogordo, N. M., Sept. 12.—Experimenting with trees and shrubs that will grow in this section of the country, the Alamogordo Lumber company has a large acreage that it is now devoting to this work. The experiments are in charge of W. G. Roe, general manager of the company.

The plant that has made the most startling progress is the Luther Burbank English walnut. Nuts planted this year have attained a growth in four months that equals the ordinary walnut growth for two years, as Mr. Roe has some of each variety in his experiment tract. The Burbank walnut is said to grow 60 feet tail in 10 years and proves a prolific producer. Mr. Roe has 4000 of these trees growing and if they prove as successful next year as they have this season and withstand the winter cold, he is going to put in thousands of them to be used to reforest the mountainsides.

Twenty Feet in a Year.

be used to reforest the mountainsides.

Twenty Feet in a Year.

Another tree that is being experimented with is a new poplar called "the sudden sawlog," which has grown on this experiment plat four feet in four months.

Black locusts are also being given a tryout. Mr. Roe has some of these that grew 20 feet in a year and four months, having been planted in May. 1910. These make good railroad tie timber when of sufficient growth.

Five thousand catalpas are being grown in the experiment plat and these are probably the most remarkable for quick growth of any that he has put out. These were planted in May, 1919, and were cut to the ground the past spring. The growth this year has been almost marvelous. Some of them are 10 feet high, having attained this growth in a little over four months.

Guayule Grows Well.

Guayule Grows Well. Peaches, grapes, roses, South Caro-lina poplar—the latter having grown eight feet in four months—Norwe-gian maple, Norwegian poplar, pecans, gian maple, Norwegian poplar, pecans, sycamore and guayule are among the other plants with which he is experimenting. The guayule is growing splendidly and Mr. Roe has hopes that it is going to prove a suitable crop for the desert land between El Paso and Alamogordo. If the pecans grow successfully here, he sees immense profits for nut raisers in the foothills on land that cannot be farmed to advantage, yet is splendid for tree growing.

court in Session.

The petit jury for the fall terms of district court has been empaneled.

During the morning session a number of minor criminal cases were disposed of, among which was that of Melvin Lumbley, charged with larceny of a horse. Defendant pleaded guilty to the charge, but sentence was not imposed by the court. Frank Smith, of Clouderoft, was arraigned on two counts, the carrying of a deadly weapon and assault with intent to kill. He pleaded guilty to the former charge and will be tried on the latter charge. Tom Stogden was arraigned charged with larceny and pleaded guilty.

The case of Bob Raley is now on trial. Raley is being tried on the charge of assault with intent to kill W. H. McNew, at Orogrande, a year ago last April. The defendant is represented by judge J. E. Wharton, of El Paso, and Capt. Reeber, of Las Cruces.

BOYS CHASE THE OUTGOING
TRAINS TO PICK UP COINS
The Mexican boys of El Paso have a new "game." They congregate in the union station yard and chase out the daylight trains, collecting nickels tossed by passengers from the observation platforms. Sometimes they follow for many blocks and show surprising speed as the train picks up momentum. The cinders and gravel in the roadbed make it hard for the barefoods but usually they are "game" and often continue "in the running" with bloody toes.
